April 2007

I met David Kibuuka almost 20 years ago when he was displaying art pieces in schools during Black History Month.

Since that time he has explored and refined other techniques such as wax batik. Two years ago he worked here at Humberwood Downs J.M.A. with a group of students on 2 long hangings using wax batik. They are now hanging in the Great Hall. Last year he worked with students on the creation of individual pieces.

This year we have decided to spread the wax batik strategy even further. We have had 2 teachers and 3 students work with David for three and a half days. The intention is for David to teach these five the finer points of wax batik and for them to teach others next year.

David is a consummate artist, living fully all the moods and stages that come from within, but he has enthusiasm and skill in communicating this to others. He personifies what the word enthusiasm means in the Greek- en+theos = the god in you.

With respect,

Beverley Muir
